

EXCERPT

"What memories do you have of our time in Nevada?"

"Our one-night stand, you mean?"
Olivia asked.

Gerald grinned. "Precisely."

She sighed, lifting a hand. "Oh, I don't know. Not much, to be honest. Tequila has a debilitating effect on my ability to retain information."

"As it does for all us mere mortals," he said with a thoughtful nod. After a moment's hesitation, he covered her hand with his free one. "I hope you don't take this too hard, but it seems on that night in Las Vegas, somewhere along the line we happened to find ourselves embedded in a wedding chapel."

Her lips twitched in wry humor. "A wedding chapel. You're kidding me, right?" When those grave, green eyes neither smiled nor strayed from hers, she fumbled. "You're...you're not? Kidding?"
